EDITORIAL

Social media are part and parcel of our day-to-day lives. The quality time we invest in it should be reciprocated in an effective way. As language teachers, we have considered the experiences in social media as a pedagogical aid to make language learning more easy and effective. Fun - an inevitable realm of human behavior—makes this process easier for comprehension too. Funpedia is a pedago literary attempt where jokes from WhatsApp posts related to language are collected and analysed to reach a linguistic concept, whereby the structural elements of language are unknowingly internalised.

We believe learning through fun will help a larger competitive group in front of us and many more to come. And the new strategies for language learning will enhance mastery of it as well as ensure the quality the curriculum intends. Fun and humour often makes human being peaceful so learning will not be burdensome.

ACRONYM

An acronym is a word formed by abbreviating a phrase by combining certain letters of words in the phrase (often the first initial of each) into a single term.

Example;

NASA – National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

SCUBA – Self-Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus.

IQ - Intelligent Quotient

If the subject is singular, the verb should be singular and if the subject is plural, the verb should also be plural.

Eg : He plays football.
(singular) (singular)

I play football.
(Plural) (plural)

ENGLISH IS NOT A PHONETIC LANGUAGE

TEACHER : Johnny, how do you spell
"Crocodile"?

JOHNNY : K-R-O-K-D-D-R-I-L

TEACHER : No, that's wrong.

JOHNNY : Maybe it's wrong, but you ask me how I spell it!

In some languages, we can look at a written word and know how to pronounce it – there is a direct relationship between the spelling and sound . English is not a phonetic language, so we don't say a word the same way it is spelled.

Here is different pronunciation of the letters “ch” in different words.

- 1) Chalk – the sound here is “ch”
- 2) Chemistry – the sound here us “k “
- 3) Champaign – here the sound is “sh.”
