The day I was late for my Examination

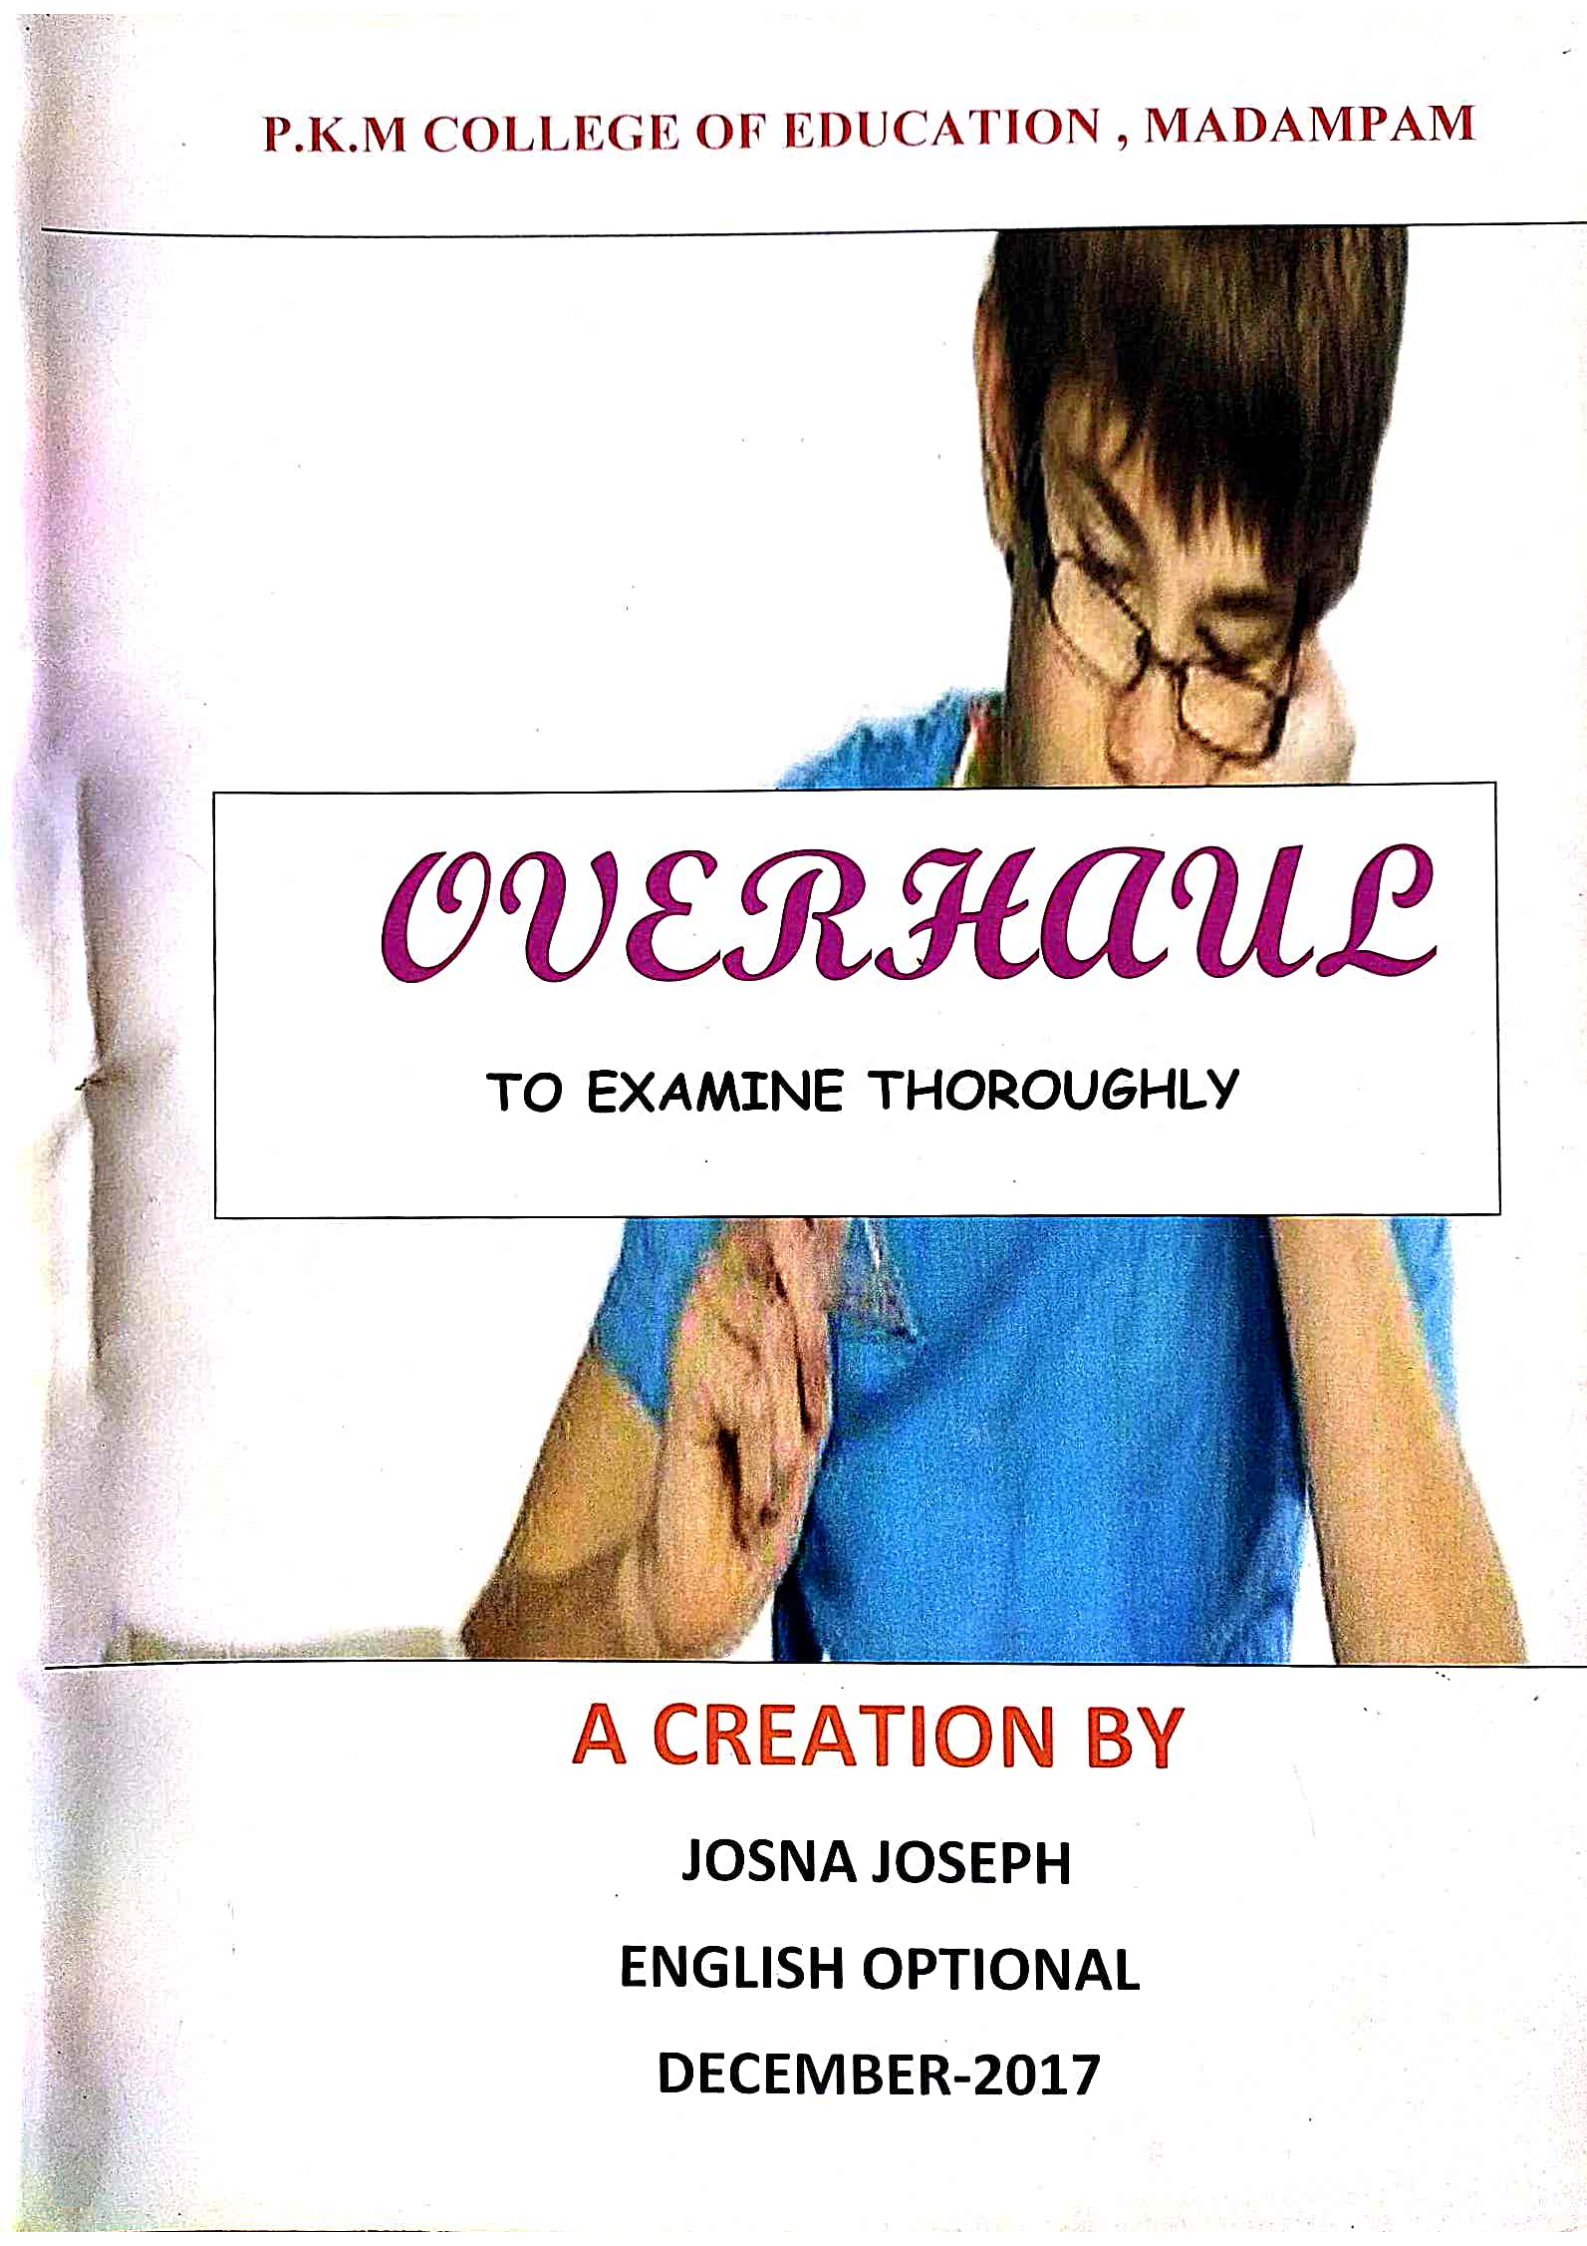

It was a breezy Monday morning.

It was a comfortable morning for a sleep. "Ring!" My alarm clock rang but I ignored it. After a while, unknowingly, I drifted into Dreamland. When I woke up, I stared at the alarm clock and could not believe my eyes. "I am late for my examination!" I waited frantically. I jumped out of bed, brushed my teeth, changed into uniform and tore out of the house. I ran as fast as my legs could carry me. On the way to school, I realised that yesterday I was revising for my examination till late night. I reached school as soon as possible and raced up the stairs to my classroom 'Primary 3 confidence'. I stopped outside of the classroom. It was so quiet that I could hear a pin drop. I was contemplating whether to go in or not. My heart started thumping fiercely against my chest and my legs started wobbling like jelly.

I wanted to see who the invigilator was so I took a peek. It was my science teacher, Mr. Murawli. From the corner of his eyes, he spotted me. My skin felt cold and clammy when he walked towards me. There was no way to escape. Beads of perspiration trickled down my forehead. With his arms crossed, he glared at me angrily and pulled me aside so as not to disturb the other pupils. "Please give me another chance", I plea-
